You have completed a general education curriculum, Spartan Ready, that prepares you for career and life success.

You're prepared for the next step in pursuing your life goals and making your impact on the world. You are our future! So, whether your next step is starting your career, continuing your education or entering service, UTampa remains ready to support your life journey. We welcome you to stay connected, and Career Services remains available as a guide.

The University of Tampa alumni community is your lifelong community. We welcome you to come back for Alumni Weekend, Gasparilla and the many UTampa cultural, athletic and scholarly events offered year-round. Engage with UTampa regional alumni groups in other cities. You will always be a Spartan and welcome at your UTampa home. When you are able, pay it forward by giving of your time, talent and treasure to support future generations of Spartans.

To those who have supported today's graduates, THANK YOU and congratulations! Your love, encouragement and financial support has empowered their achievements. I also welcome you to stay connected to the University.

As I round out my first year as president of this outstanding institution, I see tremendous opportunity for both today's graduates and UTampa. It's fulfilling to join graduates and their families on such a momentous day.

ACADEMIC COSTUME

The tradition of distinctive academic costume worn at commencement ceremonies originated at European universities in the 12th century and evolved to the mortarboards, gowns and hoods worn today.

Academic dress has been used in American schools since colonial times, but not until around 1885 was it widely used at commencement exercises. By 1895, the Intercollegiate Commission had prepared a code that provides for three types of gowns: (1) a bachelor's gown with long, pointed sleeves; (2) a master's gown with long, closed sleeves having arcs near the bottom and slits for the arms; (3) a doctor's gown with full, round, open sleeves. The velvet trim may be black, or it may be the same color as the velvet edging of the hood indicating the discipline.

The hood, the most distinctive feature of the American code, signifies the degree held and the university granting it. Hoods are lined with silk in the colors of the institution conferring the degree. The color of the velvet border indicates the degree's discipline.

Red, the traditional color of the church, indicates a degree in theology, while green, the color of medicinal herbs, stands for medicine. Among other colors representing academic disciplines are brown for fine arts; dark blue for philosophy; golden yellow for science; pink for music; and purple for law.

At The University of Tampa, master's and doctoral candidates wear hoods. Some of the colors you might see include:

Apricot: Doctorate and Master of Science, Nursing

Crimson: Master of Arts, Professional Communication, Social and Emerging Media

Drab: Master of Business Administration, Executive Master of Business Administration

Gold: Master of Science, Accounting; Business Analytics; Criminology; Cybersecurity; Exercise and Nutrition Science; Finance; Information and Technology Management; Marketing; and Entrepreneurship

Light blue: Master of Education, all degrees

Sage: Master of Physician Assistant Medicine

Colored cords represent various honor societies and programs. Bachelor's degree candidates graduating with honors wear gold cords and may wear a medallion. A student graduating from the Honors Program wears a medallion on a red and black ribbon, and a member of the Phi Kappa Phi national collegiate honor society wears a medallion on a royal blue ribbon. A member of the Psi Chi psychology honor society wears an antiqued platinum medallion on a navy ribbon. Student-athletes who are members of the national college athlete honor society, Chi Alpha Sigma, wear a bronze medallion on a black ribbon.

HISTORY OF THE MACE

In medieval England, when officials or monarchs traveled from one castle to another, they were accompanied by a military force. At the front were the inexperienced troops, who generally were arranged by seniority with the most junior in the lead. In the academic procession, this group is represented by the students, with the bachelor's candidates in the lead, followed by the master's candidates. The nobleman, represented in the academic procession by the president of the university, marched near the center, immediately followed by his most trusted bodyguard, who carried a very formidable weapon, the mace.

The mace was a heavy club with a spiked or flanged metal knob at one end, used chiefly by knights to crush the armor of opponents. By the 14th century, the mace had become mostly ceremonial. In academic processions, the mace is carried by a distinguished member of the faculty. At UTampa commencements, the mace is carried by the marshal.

The original UTampa mace was made by James Bignell of UTampa's industrial arts department at the request of David Delo, UTampa's fifth president. It was wooden, painted black and trimmed with gold.

When B.D. Owens became president of the University in 1971, he decided he wanted a new mace for his inauguration. Maces were made in England, but there was one American firm that would make them. UTampa's deadline was impossible for the American company to meet, so the mace had to be made locally.

David Dye, a local artist and an art instructor at Hillsborough Community College, was commissioned to do the design and casting.

After researching the history of the mace, Dye decided to make UTampa's mace javelin-like with a minaret shape on top. The mace took nine months to complete. The head is very thick, made with pure silver over a concrete center. The silver was garnered through a silver reclamation process from old X-ray negatives from St. Joseph's Hospital and other local hospitals. The handle is made of walnut, weighs 15 pounds and measures 43 1/4 inches.

The mace is secured in the Office of the President when not being used for official University functions.

The mahogany batons carried by the assistant marshals were designed and crafted by UTampa Professor Emeritus Richard Gude. They feature a hand-carved stylized minaret at the top, patterned after the mace carried by the marshal. These batons are topped with a solid brass tip, hand-turned from brass stock.

ALMA MATER

Steadfast and true,
sing we thy praise,
Alma Mater free.
Proud beat our hearts,
and all our days
we'll raise songs to thee.
We'll go forth to love and praise thee and be ever true.
Hail our glorious Alma Mater,
hail our Tampa U.
